On the Cover

Buddy Lee has used this part of his property for in-ground evaluations of selected azalea seedlings. Over the past 8-10 years, he has grown out un-named personal crosses to evaluate flower color, plant habit, and disease-resistance or disease-tolerance. So far, he has not introduced any of these azaleas. Note the martin houses. He says he enjoys watching the birds fly around the area, and they eat mosquitoes. Lower down are two bluebird boxes. These birds eat small insects. Over the fence is the neighbor's property and cows. Photo Buddy Lee.
